AMERICAN BOARD OF MEDICAL SPECIALTIES NAMES MEMBERS OF NEWLY FORMED STAKEHOLDER COUNCIL

Council will serve as advisory body representing volunteer physician, patient, and public interests

CHICAGO – October 29, 2018 – The American Board of Medical Specialties (ABMS) has named the members of its newly formed Stakeholder Council at the October 25-26, 2018 Board of Directors (BOD) meeting in Chicago. An advisory body representing the interests of volunteer physicians, patients and the public, the Stakeholder Council was established to ensure that the decisions of the ABMS BOD are grounded in an understanding of the perspectives, concerns and interests of the multiple constituents impacted by ABMS' work.

“The Stakeholder Council will be a valuable resource to the ABMS Board and the entire Boards Community,” stated ABMS Board Chair Barry S. Smith, MD. “As the constituents and stakeholders who are impacted by the work of the Boards, the Council members will offer a needed perspective on our work, including strategic initiatives, policies, and certification programs as well as provide recommendations on strategic directions and proactively raise issues for the Board to consider.”

The Council is composed of five representatives from the ABMS Associate Members, six public members, two at-large ABMS Member Board Executives or Directors/Trustees, one member from the greater credentialing community, and up to 10 practicing physicians. The ABMS BOD officers, including ABMS President and Chief Executive Officer Richard E. Hawkins, MD, will serve as ex-officio voting members of the Council as well.
